Evaluating the Decoupling of Economic Growth from Carbon Emissions (2000 - 2023)

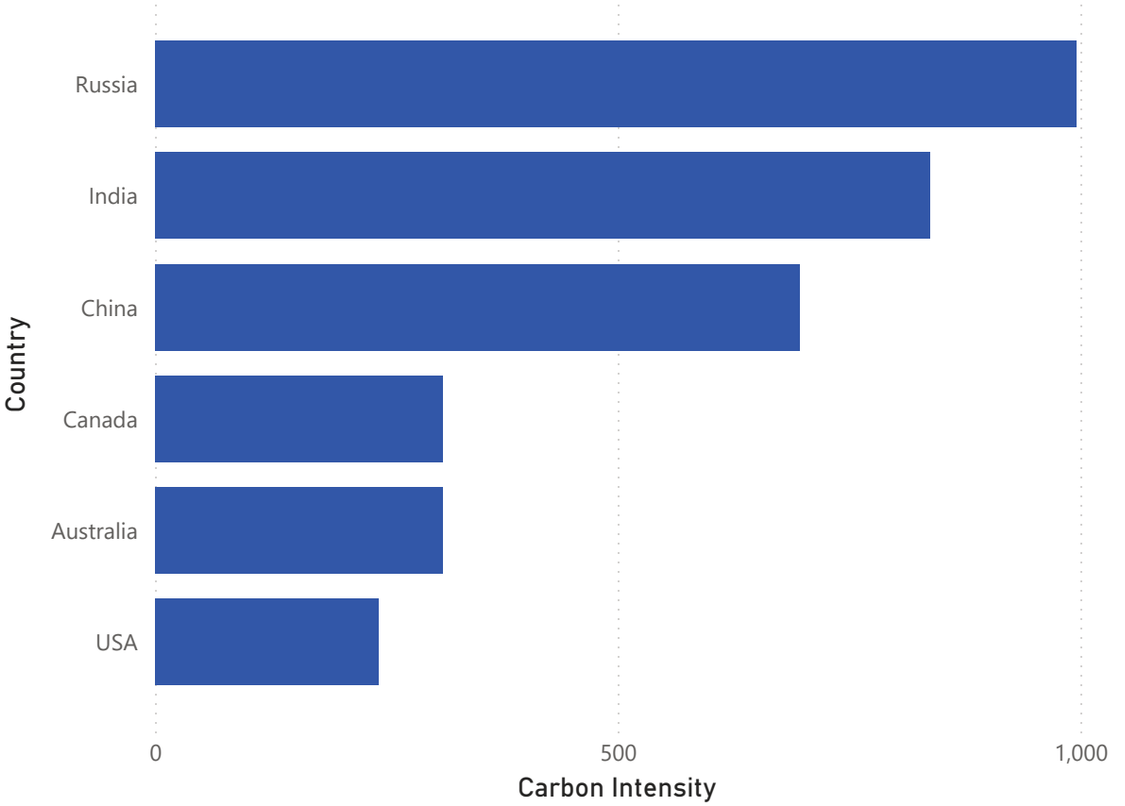

1.03K	481.23K	27.90	465.01
Total GDP	Total CO2	Avg Renewable Share	Carbon Intensity

Country
- USA
- Russia
- India
- China
- Canada
- Australia

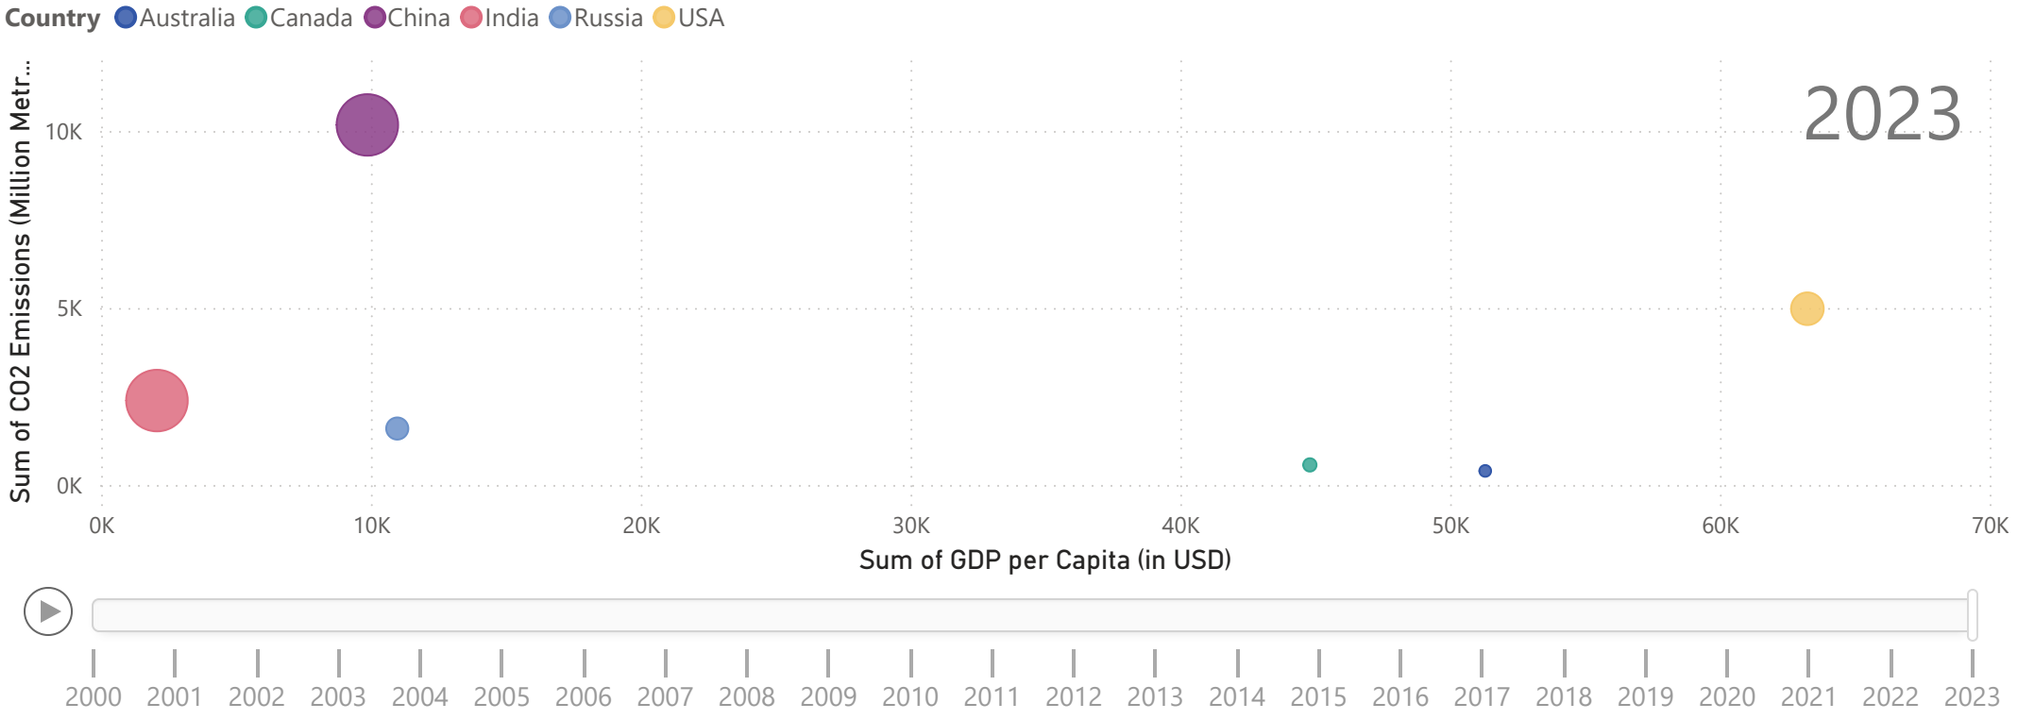

Sum of GDP (in Trillions USD) by Year and Country

Carbon Intensity by Country

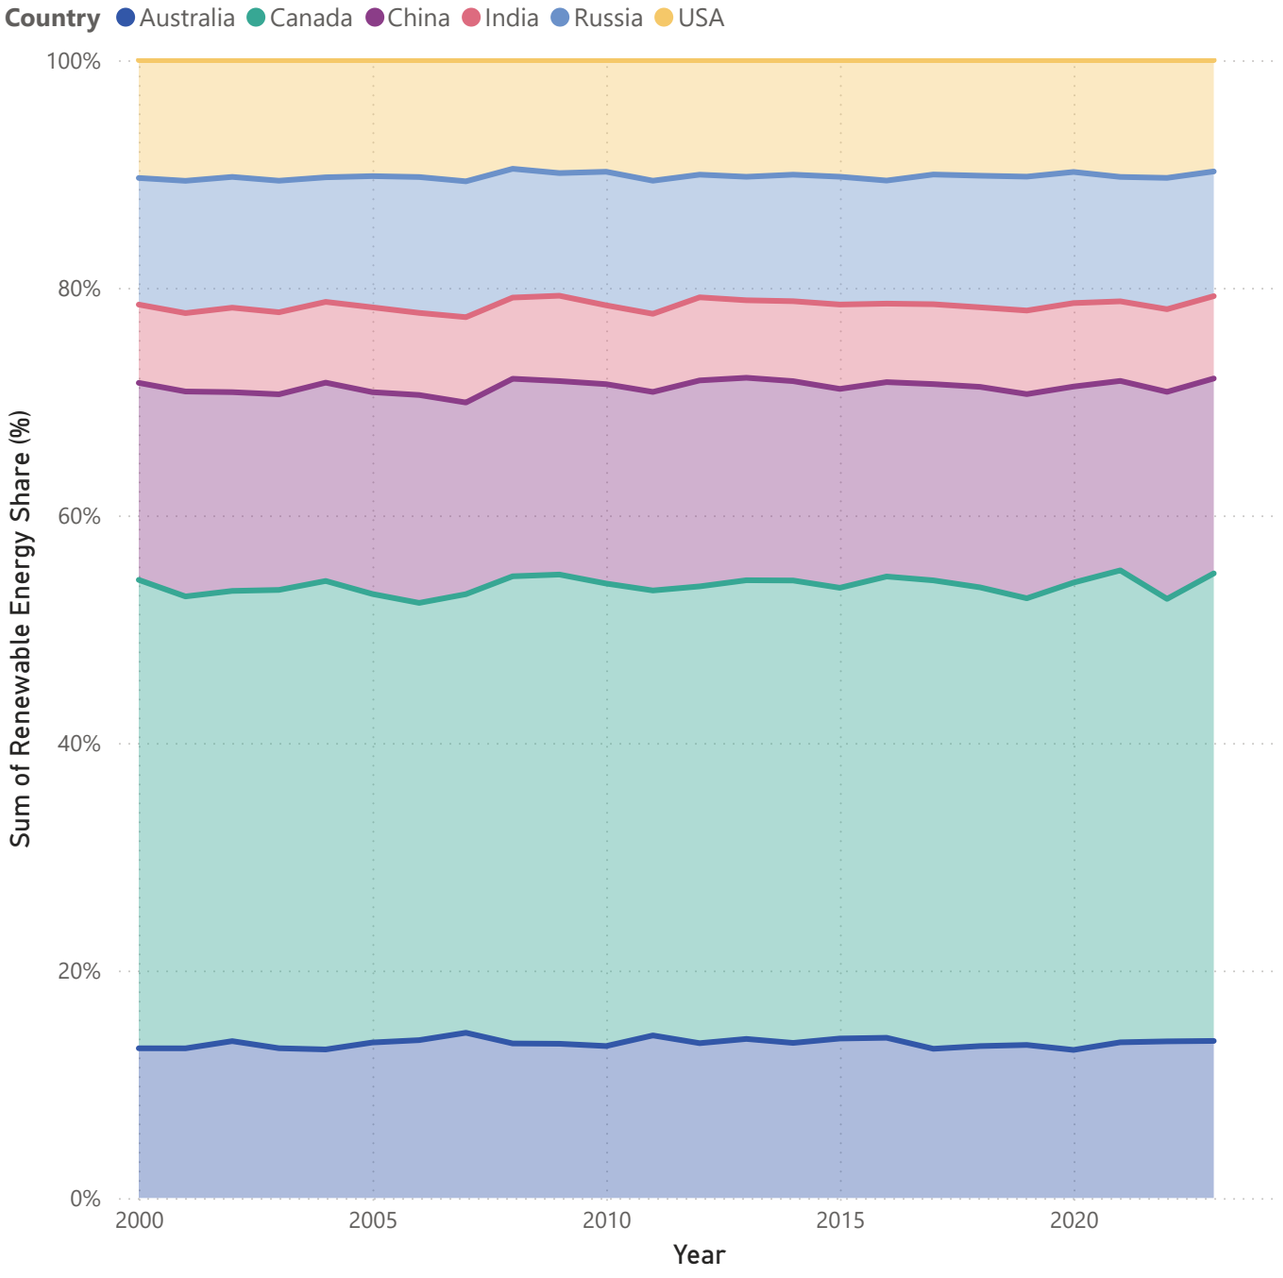

Sum of GDP per Capita (in USD), Sum of CO2 Emissions (Million Metric Tons) and Sum of Population (in Millions) by Country and Year

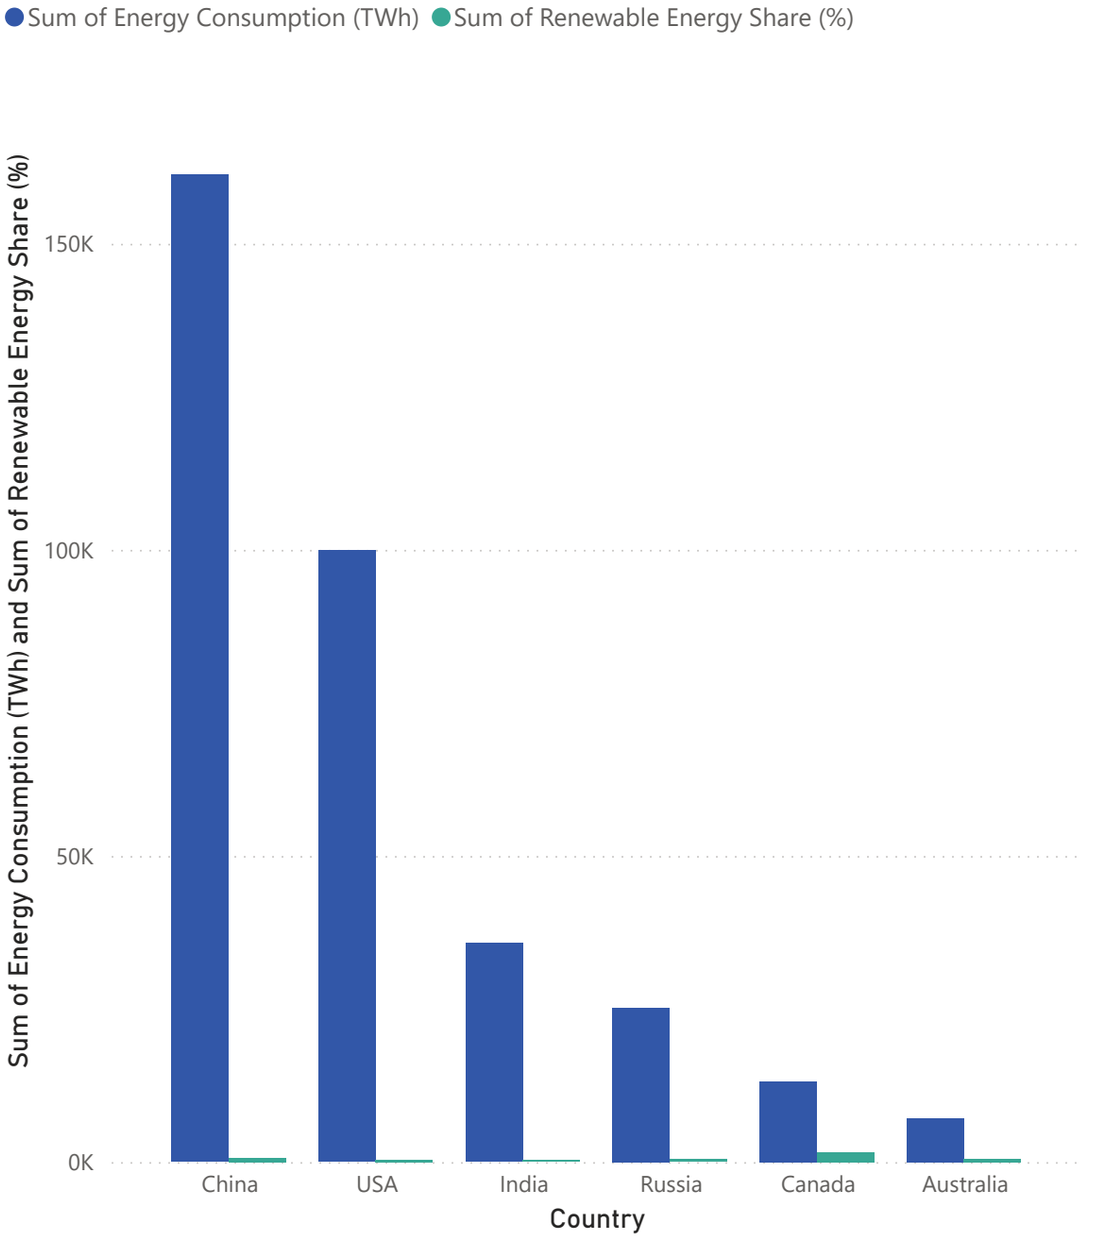

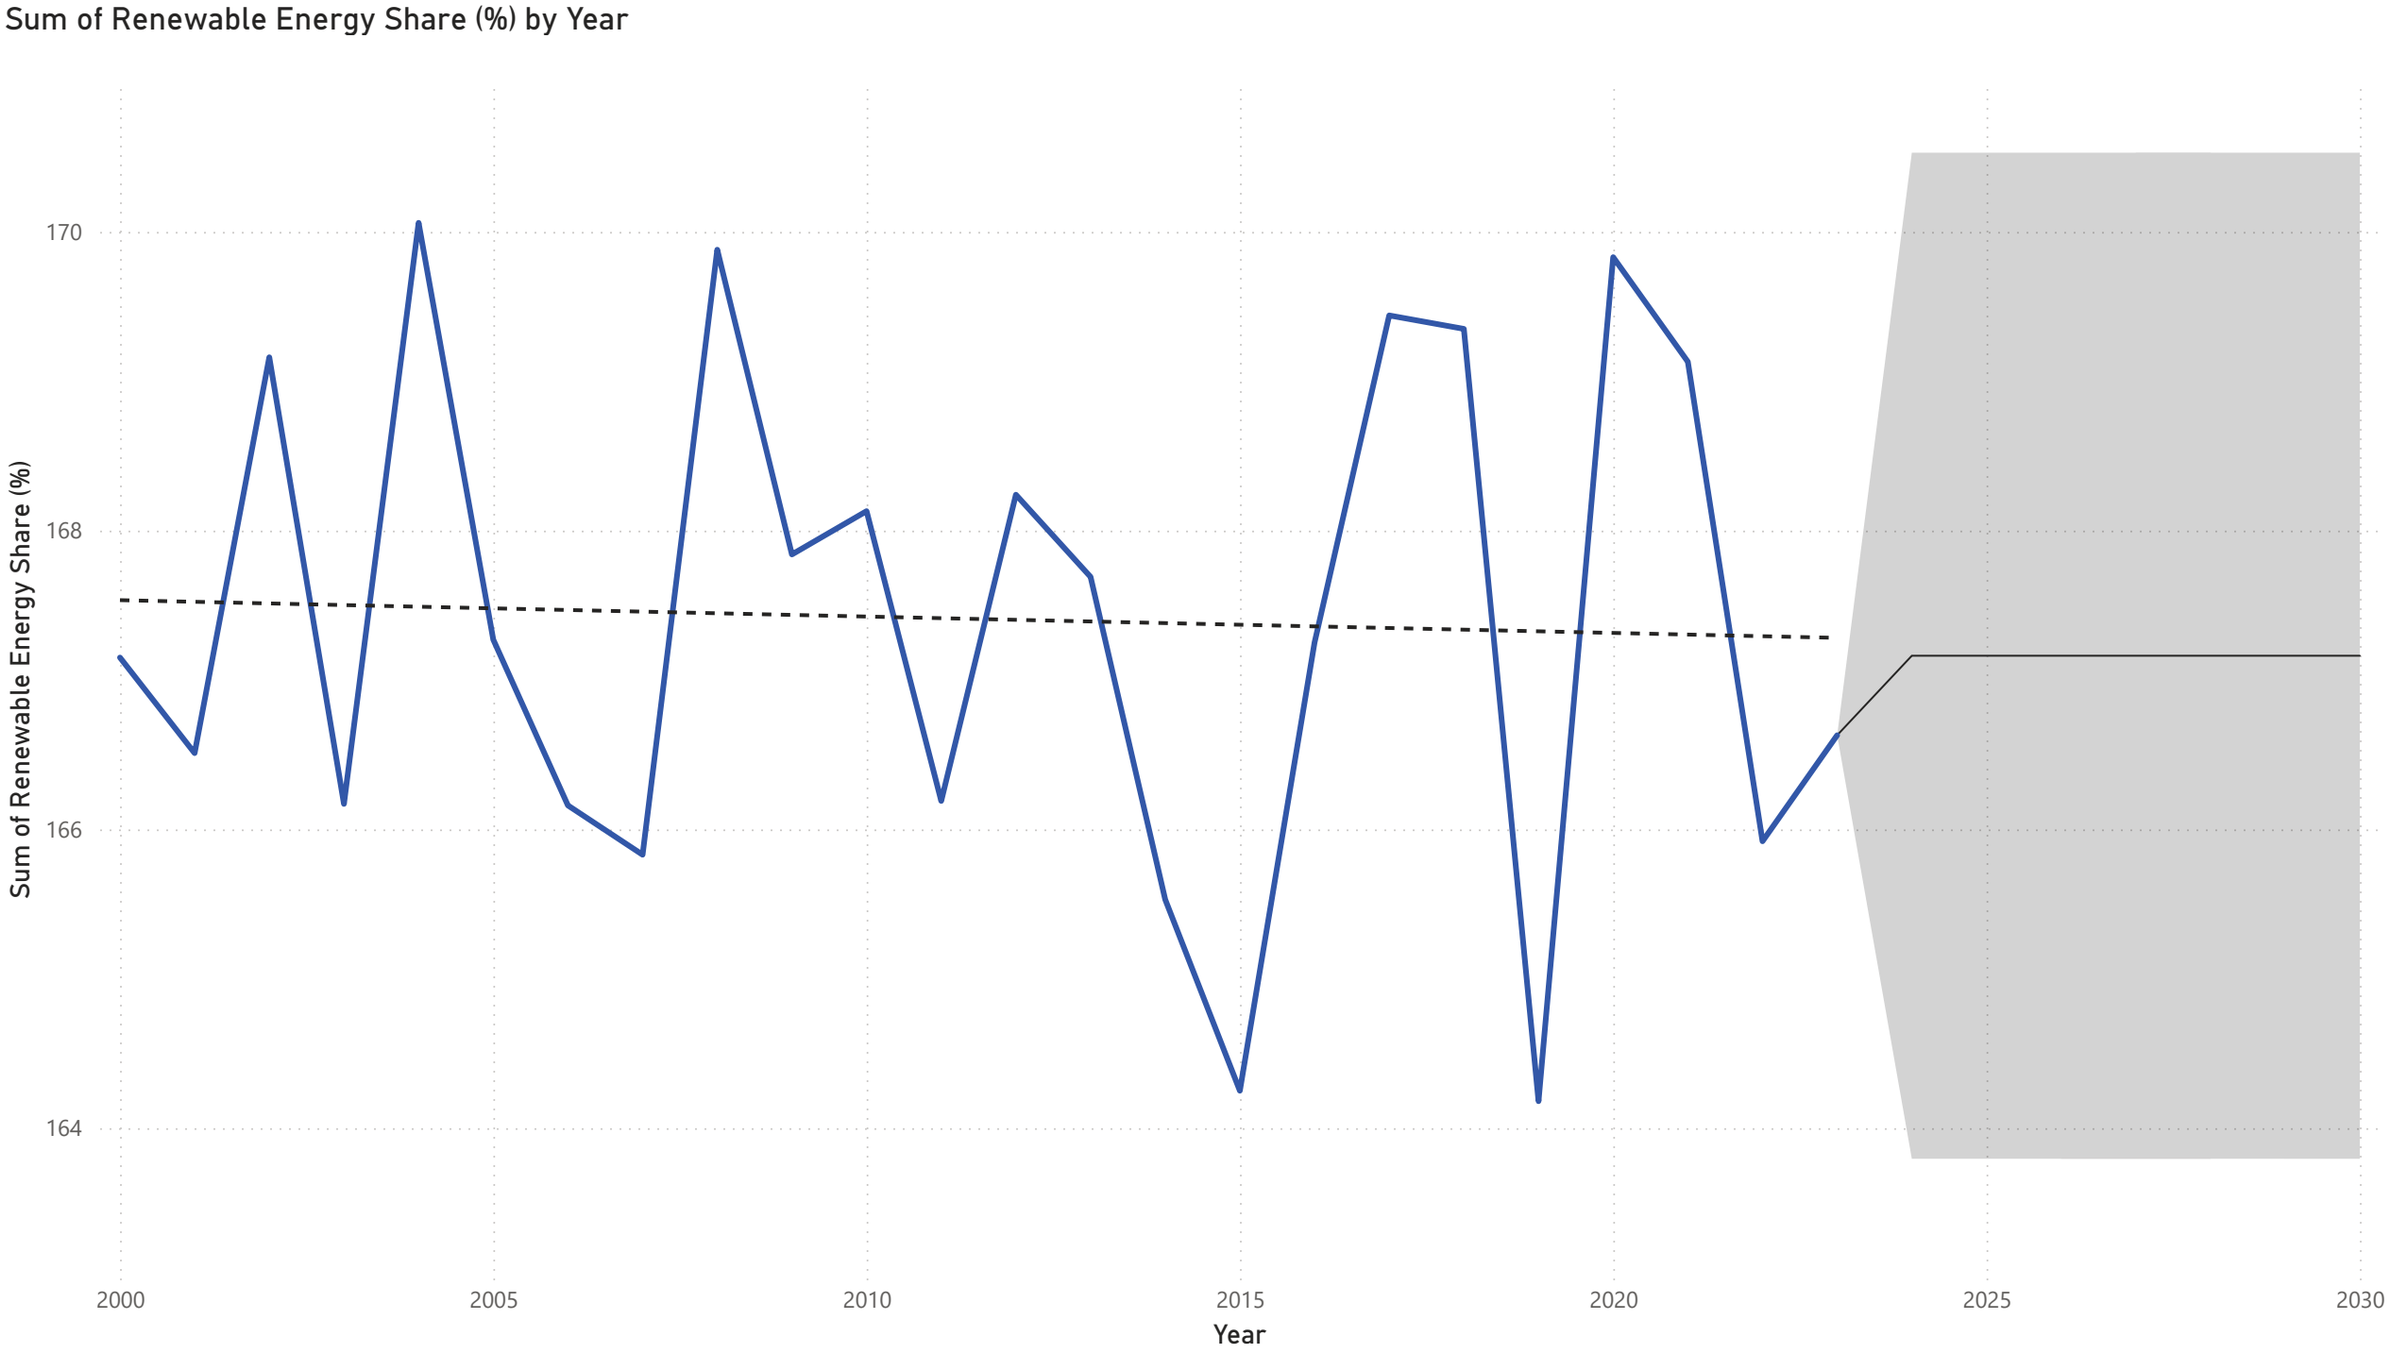

Country	Starting GDP	Ending GDP	GDP Growth %	Starting CO2	Ending CO2	CO2 Growth %
Australia	1.38	1.27	-0.08	421.48	396.47	-0.06
Canada	1.65	1.73	0.05	516.78	565.92	0.10
China	13.64	13.72	0.01	9,690.00	10,170.00	0.05
India	2.98	2.79	-0.06	2,443.20	2,383.20	-0.02
Russia	1.64	1.64	0.00	1,660.80	1,593.60	-0.04
USA	20.87	21.17	0.01	5,156.10	4,977.60	-0.03
Total	42.16	42.32	0.00	19,888.36	20,086.79	0.01

Sum of Renewable Energy Share (%) by Year and Country

Sum of Energy Consumption (TWh) and Sum of Renewable Energy Share (%) by Country

Sum of Renewable Energy Share (%) by Year
Sum of Renewable Energy Share (%)
170
168
166
164
2000
2005
2010
2015
2020
2025
2030
Year

Big economies are growing faster than their clean energy supplies, meaning industries still rely heavily on fossil fuels and emissions remain high. Without breaking the link between economic growth and carbon pollution, countries face increasing climate disasters, regulatory penalties, and fragile economies.

